program participant applied for recertification and provides documentation of the legal name change. And the Secretary of State may cancel, if there is a change in residential address, unless the participant lets them know, if the participant's mail is returned as undeliverable, or if the participant provides false information. So it's really up to the participant to keep these records straight and accurate. A program participant may request state and local agencies use the address designated by the Secretary of State. And when creating a new public record, the state or local agency which has a bona fide reason may request that the participant verbally provide the agency with a residence address if the agency has the capability to use such address without permanently entering it into the agency's records. If the agency does not have the capability, it shall accept the address designated by the Secretary of State, and then there is "unless" in there. And goes on to talk about, the Secretary of State will not make the participant's file available except for the following circumstances: number one if requested by the chief commanding officer of a law enforcement agency; if directed by a court order; or to verify the participation of a specific program participant, the Secretary of State may only confirm or deny information supplied by the requester. This protects not only that person but can also protect that person's children who may be enrolled in public schools or any other kinds of programs that they may be enrolled in that are public programs. With that, Mr. President, I would be happy to answer questions that people might have. Thank you.
